

Ali Kopyt, AIA, NCARB

Korb Architecture

Ali Kopyt is a Managing Architect with KORB Architecture in Milwaukee Wisconsin with expertise in historic preservation, adaptive reuse, and affordable multifamily housing projects. She excels at coordinating multidisciplinary project teams along with the complexities of tax credit projects. Ali believes that a collaborative process is fundamental to a successful project completion. Her interests in place making and urban development projects as catalytic opportunities for local communities comes from her passion for design at a human scale.

Ali received the AIA Wisconsin Young Architect Award in 2021 and the University of Milwaukee Alumni

Association's Legacy Award in 2025 for her leadership, mentorship, and advocacy. She is a champion of diversity in the profession, a dedicated mentor to emerging architects, and a strong advocate for accessibility in design. She co-founded Women in Design Milwaukee (WIDMKE) to support and elevate underrepresented voices in architecture and allied design fields. Ali serves on multiple local boards dedicated to education and community development. Through her work, mentorship, and advocacy, she continues to shape a more inclusive and sustainable future for the profession.
